Who?

Who? A pair of bronze boots is walking on the surface of the water. Do they belong to a larger sculpture that has been dismantled? Who? is a monument in doubt.

The tower of balance

A visit to the 13th-century Belfry inspired architect Boonserm Premthada to build The tower of balance, a contemporary bell tower that marks and gives new meaning to an unknown stretch of greenery.

Firesongs for the bees,
a tree of clay

Mariana Castillo Deball combines beekeeping with the history of beehives in a sculptural-architectural installation.

Full Swing

In the centre of a subterranean structure, a swing dangles invitingly from a metal beam. While swaying back and forth, you hover between a sense of restriction and movement, discomfort and joy, darkness and light, prison and freedom.

Star of the Sea

Star of the Sea catches the eye from afar thanks to its voluminous structure and remarkable chimneys. This strange temple on the beach at Zeebrugge explores the friction between art, industry and ecology.

Raamland

A hushed square is transformed into a fascinating place to linger, with a lush garden and newly designed elements made from second-hand materials. A place that alludes to both the past and the future.

empty drop

Een geometrische sculptuur uit steen zorgt voor een nieuwe open 'plek' in de stad en nodigt uit tot verkenning. Een viering van leegte in het drukke patroon van Brugge.

Common Thread

Common Thread meanders like a curved line through the former Capuchin monastery. The high-tech fabric guides you to new corners, revealing the site step by step.

Earthsea Pavilion

Earthsea Pavilion is made from local materials that have been mixed with plants and seeds. The silo forms a new breeding ground for fauna and flora and allows to discover peace and quiet in the heart of the city.

Under the Carpet

A walk between three sculptural interventions in a disused space invites you to rediscover a forgotten link road between St John's Hospital and the Minnewater Clinic.

The Joyful Apocalypse

This mirrored installation breathes new life into the 13th-century courtyard of the City Halls. Silver curtains and metal panels reflect both the past and the present. Together, they form a stage for user, visitor or passer-by.

Grains of Paradise

Symbolising the historical trade connection between Bruges and the African continent, a series of blackened, herb- and spice-filled proas are floating by the Minnewater Bridge. Together, they form a shared platform for exchange that references both the past and present.
